

R.A.R.E

Racism Awareness, Reconciliation, and Engagement

Resources: Articles & Websites

Getting Started

101 Things White People Can Do for Racial Justice

If you're wondering how and where to get started in anti-racism work, this list of action-oriented ideas will give you some great places to begin. The most important part of starting is...starting!

“White Privilege: Unpacking the Invisible Knapsack”

Peggy McIntosh

Peggy McIntosh is a researcher and college educator who first began to think about the issue of white privilege back in the late 80s, when she was researching male privilege. As a result of thinking deeply about and researching white privilege, McIntosh put together a list of conditions of daily experience that she took for granted, which in turn helped her realize the ways she enjoys “skin privilege” and has been conditioned into oblivion about its existence.

“What is White Privilege?”

Christine Emba

25 short New York Times documentaries ranging in length from one to seven minutes tackle issues of race, bias, and identity. Also includes questions, teaching ideas, related readings, and suggested activities.

Project Implicit

Take an online test developed by scientists at Harvard University, University of Washington and University of Virginia to discover your implicit associations about race, gender, sexual orientation, and other topics.

In-Depth Study

“The Case for Reparations,”

Ta-Nehisi Coates

Comprehensive overview of the various iterations of institutionalized oppression of African-Americans from slavery through present time.

“Ta-Nehisi Coates Revisits ‘The Case for Reparations’”

Interview with The New Yorker

“How Do We Change America?”

Keeanga-Yamahtta Taylor

Police brutality, politics and the historical roots of racism in America.